

Donya had a bright red ball.
She loved to play with it
all by herself.

Then Donya saw
two children nearby.
They looked at her ball
and smiled.

Donya hugged the ball close. She wanted to keep it safe.

But the playground
felt quiet.
Donya was playing alone.

Donya took a deep breath.
Then she said,
“Would you like to play
with me?”

The children clapped.
“Yes, please!” they said.

Donya rolled the ball to them. They rolled it back and laughed.

Soon, they began a new game together.

It was even more fun
than before.

Donya learned that sharing can make friends. It can also make playtime bigger and brighter.

From that day on,
Donya shared, played,
and made many friends.
